Lifeguards

During the summer, we had to pick a topic and prepare a	0	✓ project. I decided to do a project on lifesaving so that I chose	00	that to interview a lifeguard. I had always been imagined that lifeguards	1 were too big muscular guys who sat in the sun looking at	2 girls through from their binoculars. But this couldn't be further	3 from the truth. I found it out that when lifeguards aren't	4 on the beach, they teach lifeguard courses and first aid or	5 go around to schools lecturing on any water safety. In the summer,	6 as well as patrolling, they educate the public, administer first	7 aid and clean up after the beach. The lifeguard I interviewed	8 told to me that about eighty per cent of people who go	9 to the beach are sensible and respect the sea but the	10 rest ignore warning notices and cause problems. So a	11 lifeguard's job isn't just about the rescuing people. It's about	12 stopping them from getting into a trouble. While patrolling,	13
most of lifeguards carry a radio, a mobile phone and a loudspeaker.	14
So as you can see it, lifeguards are much more responsible	15 than television programmes lead us to believe.
